NEW DEAL PSYCHOLOGY

The philosophy of President Roosevelt is so deep and his ideals are so high that the average person cannot comprehend the magnitude of the affair, and pronounces the whole thing a rank failure. In this case, as in anything else, when a master mind takes a situation in hand, the layman can only speculate on the outcome. So it is with the opposers of the Roosevelt administration, those who are always finding fault with the new deal, are only speculating as to the outcome, but can offer nothing better, or that can even compare with it. Hitherto, except in some very rare instances, the political current of American life could be determined ahead. But things had been permitted to drift to the extent that something had to be done. Then came the tramping of the great army of forgotten men and cried, "Give us a break." The whole American populace came to realize the seriousness of the situation, and the cry for the reestablishment of the spirit of democracy was sounded aloud. Then the figurehead of that spirit arose in due time in the person of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Why do the ideals of the New Dealers seem so radical, is the question often asked. There is one answer: It is not radicalism in reality, but apparently so to the uninformed. It is only a phase of Democracy that has never been required to adjust the affairs of our citizens. The situation of every phase of our American civilization had become so desperately out of tune with the principles of democracy because of mismanagement in government affairs, and permitting certain favored classes to profit at the loss of the common man, that drastic means had to be employed to bring about the desired result.

Where would the great class of common people have been now had not the Roosevelt administration, with its Brain Trusters, New Dealers, and what not, taken the situation in hand and put into force the principles of the NRA, the CWA and the many other agencies that have been established to keep millions of people from actual starvation? You need not have been a seer to predict that we were on the eve of a revolution. It was inevitable had not the confidence in our president been established in the people and caused them to endure the suffering until something could have been done.

Had a revolution resulted, where would our constitution have been? Only a scrap of paper; a historic document. We hear much talk about the constitution being attacked by the radicalism of the New Dealers, but had there been no New Dealers, why would we have had any use of so sacred a document?

The President is making one of the most heroic fights that has ever been fought in the interest of the common man. Today he stands as a world figure. A few decades hence and he will be acclaimed one of the world's greatest men. When the national crisis became so great that the liberty of the common man was threatened, there was only one way out: Providence intervened and applied the remedy.

A GOOD RIDDANCE

College fraternities are dying, the collectors say. That's fine! Let them die, and let them be buried in the potter's field, without honors of any kind and with no mourners. Let them be buried to stay buried. Let nobody, high or low, ever propose their resurrection. Secret societies have been one of the evils which have sapped the life out of the colleges and made them as dead as Sodom. The scourge has spread to the same irreparable damage there.

College and school fraternities of the secret order are built on snobbery and class preference based on wealth, influence, social standing and gang unity. They represent gang politics as applied to our institutions of learning. They have set up wholly wrong standards as to the purposes of education. They have attempted to substitute secret "pull" and pressure for scholarship and the development of character. To a large extent they have got away with it, in the past. If their influence is on the wane it is a good thing for democracy and for the cause of education as a whole. Now is a good time to give them the "coup de grace," as the duelists say, and end them. If permitted to live at all they will be back in full force at some future time and the reform will have to start all over again.—THE PATHFINDER

Teacher and the Community

Young son, John, had a habit at home of delaying the tasks he was supposed to do. In fact he was what one might term a lazy youngster. His father one evening undertook to break him of his habits by intimating that Robert's reputation among his school mates was such that he might be thought lazy by his associates. The father and son engaged in this conversation.

"Robert, who is it when all the other boys and girls are at work in the schoolroom just does nothing?" "I don't know, Dad."

"Oh, isn't there someone in your room who just sits and looks around the room at everyone else; and who does nothing, and lets all the rest do all of the work?"

"Oh," said Robert, "You mean the teacher?"

I am sure that you will agree with me that whatever the relationship existing between the community and the teacher it should never be such as to result in the opinion Robert had gained of his teacher. Rather there should be a desire to assume the teacher's share of the work of the community.

In talking to a lawyer friend of mine one day here in West Liberty, we were discussing teachers and their jobs. I asked my friend what relation he thought should exist between the teacher and the community, and he came back at me with this statement: "She shouldn't teach where her relations are."

Whether a teacher should or should not teach in the district where relations reside is a matter of opinion; but in whatever district he or she teaches there should be an attitude that the teacher is in the position because he is worthy of the place and qualified for it regardless of any personal relationship or political pulls.

Some of my readers have perhaps heard the story of Mrs. Jones, a hard working widow, with one son, Johnnie. Many nights she and her son burned the midnight lamp while Johnnie tried to get his home work.

Mrs. Jones scratched her head over improper fractions, compound interest, and bank discount. Much water had gone over the dam since she studied the same subjects. But she wanted her Johnnie to amount to more than she did. After an especially hard evening when Johnnie cried and she nearly lost her temper over the proper method of doing a discount example, Mrs. Jones had a bright idea. The next morning she wrote the teacher this note:

"Dear Teacher: I am a hard working washerwoman. You give my Johnnie studying to do. All you have to do is to hear him recite. Would you mind teaching my boy and let the hear him recite?"

Sometimes I fear that the relationship existing between the teacher and the community is such that the parents draw a lot of the teaching while the teachers draw the pay check. And sometimes the action of the teacher in the community is such that the parents sometimes wonder when they do get any teaching done; for there is so much to occupy the teacher's time besides teaching.

The successful teacher in any community should so govern his or her conduct that it will be above reproach.

Her scholastic qualifications should be above question. She should first be morally and physically fit to teach; socially adapted to teach; scholastically qualified to teach.

"Give me ears to hear the questions
Of a knowledge-seeking child;
Give me sympathetic insight
To his problems, great and mild;
Give me patience, never ending,
For the things I teach and do;
Clear my vision—may I ever
Feel his needs and see his view.
Make me with the child to wander
Thru his happy fairy lands;
Let me skip with him and listen
To imaginary bands.
Soon his fancies all will vanish,
And the music fade away;
Fancies will change to visions:
Work will rival happy play.
Friend, and playmate of a child,
I shall never doubt his learning
While I teach the things worth while."

If such were the desire of every teacher as expressed in the foregoing poem, "My Desire," there would be no need for discussion of the relationship between the teacher and the community. It is to the discredit of the teaching profession that some have been permitted to enter the school rooms under the cognomen of teachers who have no desire to help the child solve his problems; who do not want to hear the questions of a knowledge-seeking child; who have no desire to wander with youth thru the happy fairy lands of the school room; much less teach anything worth while.

Such people parading under the garb of teachers should break off whatever relationships they have with the community in which they teach and withdraw from the teaching profession. For unless the heart of the teacher be in his work, his work is of little value. A teacher should love to teach. The work should hold a challenge for anyone who is in it. The teacher and his work should challenge the respect of the whole community.

My dear teachers: I hope that in the community where you teach the people do believe that you love to teach. I hope that the people of your community do realize from your relationship with them that teaching is an art. I hope that in your community where you teach your pupils and their parents do believe that it is the main aim of your happy days to become a good teacher—that you are now a good teacher. I hope that in the community where you teach the work of the teacher is regarded as a profession; that your people may realize that your whole life is wrapped up in your work of being a teacher, that teaching is with you more than a profession, more than an occupation, more than a struggle, that it is with you also a passion and that you can begin each day with these words, "I love to teach."

When you teachers take this attitude toward your work then the question of attendance will be solved and the relation between teacher and students, teacher and parents, will be very pleasant and happy.

Watch for next week's issue of the Courier; I will have something to say in regard to attendance.

Very truly yours,
W. O. PELFREY,
Attendance Supervisor.

HEATING PLANT ON BLINK

The West Liberty school plant is supposed to be heated by a hot water system.

Beginning this week, it became necessary to have some artificial heat, as the temperature has been hovering around the freezing point every morning.

The janitor has been having the furnace going but the water pressure has been too low to get any hot water into the radiators of most of the rooms of the building, and as a result the scholars of those rooms are being cheated out of the training due them.

The teachers report every morning, call the roll, and then dismiss for the day because the house is too cold to stay.

PRESIDENT'S POLICY

Ashland, Ky., Oct. 29.—A new "Magna Charter" for the victims of the depression—those willing to work but unable to find employment—was enunciated by President Roosevelt in his "Fire-Side Chat" to the nation on September 30, last, Congressman Vinson declared today.

No words of a President ever brought more hope to an unfortunate minority. Mr. Vinson added, than the ringing declaration of Mr. Roosevelt that he "Would stand or fall" by his "refusal to accept as a necessary condition of our future a permanent army of unemployed."

For all too long, Congressman Vinson continued, Americans have been content to accept the theory that, while it is unfortunate, we must reconcile ourselves to the fact that there will always be a great number of men with out jobs in this country. President Roosevelt cannot, and will not, endorse this defeatist philosophy. He does not say that, by some magic means, every unemployed person will be given a job overnight. He knows, as does any one who has given even scant attention to the subject, that it will take time, study and effort to eliminate the army of unemployed. The important thing is that President Roosevelt refuses to adopt the do-nothing policy of some of his predecessors. He intends to make it a "national principle" to relieve present unemployment and prevent its return.

The words of the President, outlining his policy on unemployment, were quoted by Congressman Vinson as follows:

"Some people try to tell me that we must make up our minds that for the future we shall permanently have millions of unemployed just as other countries have had them for over a decade. What may be necessary for these countries is not my responsibility to determine. But as for this country, I stand or fall by my refusal to accept as a necessary condition of our future a permanent army of unemployed. On the contrary, we must make it a national principle that we will not tolerate a large army of unemployed, and that we will arrange our national economy to end our present unemployment as soon as we can and then to take wise measures against its return. I do not want to think that it is the destiny of any American to remain permanently on relief rolls."

NOBLE KENTUCKIAN DIES

James Breathitt Jr. died at his home at Hopkinsville on Monday of this week, of pneumonia.

James Breathitt Jr. was born at Hopkinsville Dec. 14, 1886. He had just taken up the practice of law when the World war broke out. He enlisted in the aviation corps and served with distinction until the close of the war.

Mr. Breathitt was elected lieutenant governor in 1927 and presided over the state senate during the time when Flen D. Sampson was governor.

Mr. Breathitt was an advocate of primary elections for state officials, and was an aspirant for the governorship in 1931. Later he was elected to the state senate and led the fight against the gross sales tax.

Mr. Breathitt is survived by his mother, his widow, and one son, James Breathitt III.

His death has created a vacancy in the senate seat for his district and will necessitate a special election.

NOTED PHILANTHROPIST DIES

Howard E. Taylor, noted philanthropist and for some years business manager of Berea college, died at the Good Samaritan hospital at Lexington on Tuesday of this week. He had been taken seriously ill while playing the organ at the Union church at Berea on September 30.

Born at Philadelphia, Pa., Mr. Taylor received his major school training at Doylestown Seminary in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

He taught in the public schools of Bucks county for several years. During the World war he was director of personnel for the Army Young Men's Christian association.

Mr. Taylor had retired from a successful business career some thirty years ago. For a number of years he has been business manager for Berea College serving the school practically without pay.

VETERAN WANTS COMRADE

West Liberty, Ky.
October 27, 1934

To the Veterans of Morgan County: It has been my privilege to assist many of you with your various claims and I have always plead with you to stick together and fight for each other and now that we have a comrade in this fight, Hon. Fred M. Vinson, we want to go to the polls and vote and support him because he is a World War Veteran. Also on his record.

You will recall by going over his record that he supported the Adjusted Compensation Bill (known as the Bonus) he opposed the passage of the economy bill where the men receiving disability allowance, that is the $12.00, $18.00 and $24.00 men lost their pensions in the passage of this bill, and he has voted for the benefit of the Veteran in all measures that have come before Congress since he has been a member.

In the matter of public roads he has fought for federal aid and helped Kentucky to secure $12,000,000.00 of aid thru this source, and has stood for anything that would aid Kentucky or his district.

Therefore I want to appeal to you to talk to your friends and relatives and let us go to the polls on Nov. 6, 1934, 100 per cent strong for Fred M. Vinson, and we will make Morgan County a banner county for him in this race.

Sincerely your Comrade,

LYNN B. WELLS

Mrs. Mollie Cottle of Forest visited Mrs. Lacy Yance, here, the week end.

POULTRY

LIKE GRADING PLAN IN MARKETING EGGS

More Careful Practices Are Found Profitable.

By R. E. Cray, Poultry Extension Specialist, Ohio State University—WNU Service.

Each year more eggs are marketed on a graded basis. Along with this trend it is noticeable that poultrymen are taking better care of their eggs. And we are finding that the farm practices leading to better quality are no more difficult to follow than many of the practices now in vogue that lead to poorer quality.

Eggs, like milk, deteriorate. Because the egg comes in a sealed package, and its appearance seems much the same whether kept under good conditions or poor conditions, farmers have come more slowly to those practices that make for quality.

Here are the four practices poultrymen say lead to good quality:

Remove all cockerels from the flock as soon as the breeding season is ended.

Use good laying ration. It happens that the best laying rations also are proving to be the rations that give quality and, when the eggs are fertile, hatchability.

Produce clean eggs, by using good litter in nests, on the floor, and covering dropping boards with wire netting.

Gather eggs frequently. One poultryman reports saving time by gathering four times a day. He had less washing to do, he explained.

Guinea Fowls Marketed

Like Other Game Birds

The marketing season for guinea fowls is during the latter part of the summer and throughout the fall. At this time the demand in the city markets is for young birds weighing from one to two pounds each. As the season advances, the demand is for heavier birds.

Guineas are marketed as game birds and, like game birds, are usually sold on the market unplucked, although hotels and restaurants buy them plucked. There are three varieties of guineas, white, pearl, and lavender, and although they were probably one of the earliest domesticated fowls, they still retain many of their wild characteristics. They can be raised profitably on most farms where the young birds are allowed to range, picking up waste grain and insects.—Missouri Farmer.

Warns Poultrymen on Iodine

Because production of eggs with a high iodine content is quite easy, and lately has become somewhat of a fad, California poultrymen have been advised by Dr. H. J. Almquist, research assistant in poultry husbandry, University of California, to proceed cautiously along this line. "The principle guiding much of this work," he said, "seems to be that, if a small amount of iodine in eggs is desirable, a large dose of it would be much better. This is following the same rule which caused the Indian buck to kill himself with cough medicine." Minimum and maximum iodine requirements of laying birds and growing chicks, according to Doctor Almquist, are not known, and until they are, considerable caution in the use of iodine supplements is to be recommended, he said.

Watch the Water Supply

Water fountains for poultry are often counted expensive appliances. Those who keep only a small flock are apt to think ordinary open vessels which can be bought for a small fraction of their cost will do as well. The great advantage of the fountain is that it keeps the water much longer at the temperature it was when put in, and that in summer there is very little evaporation from it. On a hot, dry day water will evaporate from open drinking vessels so fast that they may be dry long before the time when they are usually refilled. Where the attendant is away from home all day, the consequence is that the birds are without water when they need it most.

Poultry Affairs

Poultry houses should be ventilated at the top.

Poultrymen have found it costs just as much to feed a nonlaying hen as it does a high producer.

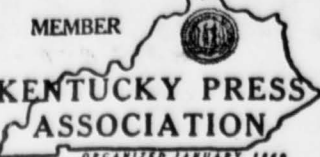

The good layer has a long, slightly curved keel, a deep abdomen and body, a broad, straight, smooth back, good chest development, straight sides, with the wings carried back from the hip bone to the stern.

Most of the hens in a flock can be kept in laying until late fall, when they should be allowed to rest about six weeks.

Yellow corn is much more valuable for scratch feed than white corn. It contains vitamin A which is so necessary for poultry growth.

Poultry experts have found that fowl pox, commonly known as "sorehead," is caused by a microscopic germ affecting the skin and mucous

FARMERS' COLUMN

THE FARM AND HOME

Farmers are urged to save sorghum cane seed. There was a scarcity of sorghum of all kinds this year, which may result in a seed shortage next year. Even farmers who grew sorghum for sirup are urged to save seed.

Experiments indicate that one of the most efficient and cheapest poultry rations consists of nothing more than corn, skim milk and mineral. Limestone fulfills the demand for minerals, which means that many Kentucky farmers produce a good poultry ration on their farms.

It is best to wait until leaves have fallen before setting trees and shrubs. Many persons make the mistake of setting them too early in the fall. Nov. 15 to Dec. 10 is considered a good time in Kentucky.

Nov. 11-17 has been designated national honey week. Honey should be better known and more widely used, as it is the oldest and best of the many sweets. A perdigested food, it is readily assimilated when taken into the system.

Tests made at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station show that manure gives the best results when applied to corn, in a corn, wheat and clover rotation. When applied on wheat, the increase in the corn yields was much less than when applied directly to corn.

Timely College of Agriculture extension circulars: Cherries in Kentucky; Home Storage Structures and Equipment; Soil Management; Killing, Cutting and Curing Pork; Korean Lespedeza; The Hydraulic Ram; Poultry Parasites and Sanitation; Producing Milk of Good Quality.

NEW CORN-HOG SIGN-UP

Following an approval of the corn-hog program, by farmers voting in the recent poll, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced that it will make public its 1935 plan about Nov. 1.

A statement by Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the corn-hog section, says, in part: "The referendum results seem to indicate rather clearly that corn-hog producers want a follow-up program. In view of this indication, it has been decided to offer a definite plan as follows:

as the necessary provisions can be worked out. Such a plan probably will follow the general outline of the 1934 contract, involving control requirements and benefit payments with respect to corn and hogs.

"We are particularly interested in simplifying administrative procedure in order to eliminate unnecessary delays and to plug up holes that developed in working out the operations of the 1934 program."

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration's statement, released thru the College of Agriculture at Lexington, says that "a new corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1934 contract is deemed advisable to prevent an excessive increase in corn acreage and production and in hog numbers over the next year or two."

GOOD CHICKENS PAY

Sixty-six farmers cooperating with the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, in demonstrating good poultry raising, reported an average return of approximately $1.50 per bird over feed cost and miscellaneous expenses for the ten months period of Nov. 1, 1933, to Sept. 1 this year. There were a total of 7,345 layers in the 66 flocks.

White Leghorns averaged 155 eggs in the ten months and returned $1.17 over feed cost and miscellaneous expenses. Rhode Island Reds averaged 146 eggs and a profit of $1.82; Barred Plymouth Rocks, 135 eggs and $1.60, and White Plymouth Rocks, 117 eggs and $1.63.

Practically all of the eggs were sold at regular town store prices.

Samuel E. Bays, editor of the Plymouth (Ind.) Daily Pilot, says:

"There is a lot of talk these days about 'social security.' Books have been written about it and new deal statesmen consider it a part of their plan to make over the economic and social laws and customs of this nation.

"By social security is meant that every man, woman and child shall be secure in having the comforts of life; that none will have to worry about want during life or in old age. Can we have this social security without giving up something which is worth far more than security?

"And shall we say, as a nation or as individuals, that everybody shall be secure in the comforts of civilized life no matter what he does? Shall the man who saves and strives and thinks carefully for his physical and mental comfort be compelled to pay out of his savings to support in comfort the one who squanders his substance in riotous living, and wrecks his physical and mental life by his excesses?

"If that is attempted, we might as well go farther and have the churches guarantee also that every person shall go to Heaven, or the Happy Hunting Grounds, regardless of what his life has been.

"This is a hard problem. Certainly every person who fails or comes to a sorry condition in life by no fault of his own should be cared for in some way. But just as certainly he who wastes his substance and his life by careless living is not entitled to any governmental aid.

"If life were made socially secure, all striving and worry taken from the shoulders of men and women, the human race would rapidly deteriorate and our civilization would disappear. We are so made. Human beings must strive to accomplish, either by desire for better things or by compulsion of necessity, in order to make progress.

"There is dispute now as to whether the race has progressed or gone backward during the past two thousand years or more."

"DOUGH BOYS"

When the American bankers came to Washington for their national convention they had "blood in their eye." They were going to tell Roosevelt—wow, wow!—yes, they would! But he appeared before their association and "talked turkey" and smiled the Presidential smile. After that the olive branch was extended by Jackson E. Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York, as spokesman for the banking forces of the country.

Believe it or not, it looks as tho the new union of government and bankers is a good match. For the sake of the public let us hope that the twain may work together for the common good.

People's Column

Relief, Kentucky, October 22, 1934

Editor,

The Licking Valley Courier,

Dear Sir:

Please permit me to use this column to answer the question of Mrs. Noah Nickell which appeared in this column last week.

There is a law requiring the reading of the Bible each day in the public school of Kentucky, altho I cannot recall to mind the section where it can be found, but certainly I have read it right from the Statute. This law makes it compulsory to read a certain portion from the Bible each day. I find that some teachers ignore this requirement if they know about it. But ignorance of the law excuses no one. The law is sadly neglected and we need officers who will enforce these we already have. I very heartily agree with Mrs. Nickell that, altho we live in a land with churches and Sunday Schools, there is room for expansion in religious and moral activities right among ourselves.

When the people get busy and go to the polls and cast their vote for Christian men and women who aspire to public office instead of catering to dirty politicians, this will be a country safe to live in and in which God will be glorified. But when we remain content or apparently unconcerned and let the lawless element elect so drunkards to office, we cannot expect to see anything but young men and women drink and ruin their lives by the things that drink will ultimately lead them.

Morality and righteousness should be taught in our public schools along with the subjects that are supposed to culture the mind. Herein lies the great opportunity of the teacher to render to humanity a service scarcely found in any other position.

A Heartfelt Thanksgiving

THE tradition of days of Thanksgiving in this country has been that they were appointed out of gratitude for perils overcome and dangers averted rather than as thanks for a season of bounteous crops. There was only a meagre harvest in 1621 when Governor Bradford appointed the first American day of Thanksgiving, but he appointed it nevertheless.

Since 1864, our Presidents have proclaimed annually the last Thursday in November as a day of national thanksgiving. That day falls this year on November twenty-ninth.

A Good Year to Celebrate

If we adhere to the original reason for thanksgiving, this year with its strikes, actual and threatened, its disastrous drought, its threats of war, its need of millions for relief of the poor and its widespread business stagnation is a mighty good year to celebrate.

But, if you want to hear celebratory as well as celebrate it, pack up every morsel of food you have left after dinner in baskets, and start out to look for someone who needs it. If you don't know anyone yourself, your local relief organization can give you the names of any number of people who will appreciate such a call.

It's a good plan, too, when you do this, to ask for people who have children in the family. They will not only appreciate the bits you take to them but it is harder for children to miss the feeling of Thanksgiving Day than for grown-ups. They may not say very much in the way of thanks, but their mothers will, and you'll find, as you turn toward home with your empty basket, that Thanksgiving this year has given you a glowing feeling of friendship and brotherhood with all the world.

What shall you serve at this dinner to be shared with others beside your guests in this stimulating way? Here's a suggested menu to serve eight and be sure to be lavish in your ordering so that you will have plenty to share.

Harvest Fruit Cup
Tomato and Lima Bean Soup
Roast Duck with Celery Stuffing
Orange Sauce
Potato Croquettes
Creamed Bermuda Onions
Squash au Gratin in Ramekins
Cranberry and Apple Sauce
Chicken with French Dressing
Indian Nut Pudding
Stem Raisins
Mints
Coffee

And here are tested recipes for some of the dishes with which you may not be familiar.

Don't These Sound Good?

Harvest Fruit Cup: Choose red-skinned apples, and dice two-thirds of a cup of raisins. Heat the apples in a cup of water, add the raisins and cook for ten minutes. Drain and mix with one-half cup of sugar and one-half cup of lemon juice. Cook for five minutes more.

pineapple, pour over one cup sweet cider and one cup pineapple syrup, and serve in glass cups very cold.

Tomato and Lima Bean Soup: To the contents of a No. 3 can of tomatoes add one and a half cups brown stock, the liquor from a No. 1 can lima beans, sixteen peppercorns, eight allspice berries, one bay leaf, one slice onion and half a teaspoon celery seed. Simmer twenty minutes, then add three tablespoons butter which has been browned, then three tablespoons flour added and browned again. Stir well, then press all through a sieve. Add one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and more salt if necessary. Add the lima beans, and serve in cups with a few beans in each.

Squash au Gratin in Ramekins: To three cups canned squash add three tablespoons melted butter and two well-beaten eggs, one and a half teaspoons salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Put into small, buttered ramekins. Melt two tablespoons butter, add one-half cup crumbs and mix thoroughly, add one-fourth cup grated cheese and sprinkle this mixture over the top. Brown in a moderate oven, 375 degrees.

Cranberry-Apple Sauce: Mix together in a sauce pan the contents of a No. 2 can of cranberry sauce and one cup of apple sauce (fresh or canned) and cook for ten minutes.

A Late Snack Helps Bring Sound Sleep to Betty Boop

By Mabel Love

It requires a lot of energy to keep going all the time like little Mae (Betty Boop) Questel, the voice of Betty Boop, screen character. Mae herself, on or off the stage, is as vivacious as the screen Betty Boop. Her laugh and merry brown eyes are just as infectiously captivating.

"I keep busy, of course, but I'm strong and healthy and I suppose that is because my mother takes good care of me," Mae explains, and in offering this explanation she undoubtedly gives credit where credit is due. Her mother is of the sensible, old-fashioned type whose every thought is for her daughter's health and happiness.

Science has shown that a light, easily digested snack just before going to bed helps bring sound sleep, and this is a practice which Mae regularly follows. After one of her stage appearances, just before going to bed, she usually eats a generous bowl of corn flakes and cream which her mother provides for her.

Her mother plans her other meals, too, taking care to choose the foods that promote health and energy. A bran nut bread falls in this class and below is a recipe for it.

Bran Nut Bread
1 egg 1 1/2 cups flour
1/3 cup sugar 1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk 2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon melted shortening 1/2 cup chopped nut meats
Beat egg and sugar until light, add milk to which melted shortening has been added. Add bran. Sift flour with salt and baking powder. Add nuts to flour mixture and mix well with other ingredients. Fill greased bread pan three-quarters full and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) one hour and fifteen minutes. Yield: one large loaf.
